Haitian Schoolchildren Go Back to School With Hope for Haiti's Help

Haiti is going back to school. Because of the earthquake, the coming year will be remarkably harder than the last. On one hand, more students are concentrated in fewer schools with fewer resources than before. On the other, students, teachers, and communities face enormous economic challenges.

St. Jude of Pereno Primary School, perched on a remote mountaintop but packed with students.

Recently, the Haitian government estimated that the earthquake destroyed over 1,300 schools. Other international estimates put the toll around 5,000. But the loss to education that Haiti endured goes beyond physical destruction. A chunk of the past school year, countless teachers and directors, and immeasurable amounts of school materials perished in the quake. The uphill battle that is education in Haiti has become much steeper.

Students head back to school at St. Rose Primary School in the mountain town of Gris Gris.

The schools that are still open are working hard to compensate for the nation's losses. As the first day of class draws near, Hope for Haiti is committed to giving these schools a successful start. This year we'll be supporting Teacher Salaries at 40 private and community schools, lightening the burden on directors and families to pay for those children the State leaves behind.

Preparing a child for classes is no small feat: there are books to buy, tuition to pay, shoes and uniforms to size. Any gift, even $5, will help these children. After Haiti's recent tragedy, your donation would bring healing to a child who hopes, who dreams of a better future for herself and for her country.

Haiti, despite the earthquake, is going back to school. Alongside Hope for Haiti, you can help.
